

Go-to-market strategy: Attach, Enforce, Brand

Recommendation: reposition DigiCert Valimail DMARC Essentials from a stand-alone security pitch into an attach product that each partner lists in its own catalog and adds at every point where customers already buy domains, email and SSL. This removes the main blocker, partner bandwidth, because it needs no new tool, project or sales motion.

Situation

- All four partners resell DigiCert products and own the customer's domain, DNS, email or SSL relationship.
- Their teams are focused on selling certificate automation, so a new stand-alone campaign competes for attention and loses.
- Gmail and Yahoo (2024) and Microsoft (2025) now require SPF, DKIM and DMARC, which gives every customer a reason to act now.

The strategy in three stages

1. Attach

Sell DMARC Essentials at checkout, renewal, email-hosting setup, support conversations and automation projects.

2. Enforce

Instant SPF, automated DKIM and automated DMARC move each domain safely to enforcement, with reports that prove it.

3. Brand

Enforced domains are ready for a DigiCert VMC or CMC through BIMl Amplify, a higher-value follow-on sale.

Positioning statement

For every business that sends email from its own domain, DigiCert Valimail DMARC Essentials is the automated email-authentication product that stops spoofing and meets Gmail, Yahoo and Microsoft sender requirements, sold by each partner alongside the domain, email and SSL products customers already buy.

Why this works

- Low partner effort: ready-made product page, sales sheet, emails and attach copy; partners only publish and paste.
- Fits the automation push: automation and DMARC both touch the customer's DNS, so partners add DMARC in the same visit.
- Customer urgency is external: mailbox-provider rules, spam problems and scam emails do the selling.

- Built-in upsell: every enforced domain is a VMC or CMC opportunity.
